Gameplay 465 So.2d 964 (1985) Timothy GOCHENOUR, Appellant, v. CITY OF BOCA RATON, a municipal corporation of the State of Florida, Appellee. No. 84-1316. District Court of Appeal of Florida, Fourth District. February 13, 1985. Rehearing Denied March 26, 1985. Richard A. Sherman and William C. Beall of Tew, Jordan & Schulte, P.A., Boca Raton, for appellant. Richard W. Ervin and Robert E. Rawson of Ervin, Varn, Jacobs, Odom & Kitchen, P.A., Fort Lauderdale, for appellee. DOWNEY, Judge. In this malicious prosecution action, the plaintiff-appellant is the defendant-appellee who prevailed on a motion for summary judgment and then appealed. The appellant had been arrested in June of 1981 for the crime of lewd and lascivious *965 conduct on a person under the age of sixteen. Thereafter, the criminal charge was dismissed for lack of probable cause, but the appellant was not successful in having the dismissal set aside. The appellant then instituted this malicious prosecution action against the appellee, a law enforcement agency which had arrested him, charging that the appellee had prosecuted the appellant maliciously. The appellee's position throughout the litigation has been that no probable cause existed for the arrest because the complaining witness, an underaged boy, did not exist. The parties filed cross-motions for summary judgment. The trial court entered a summary judgment for the appellant, directing the appellee to dismiss the appellant from the suit. On appeal, the appellee urges that the trial court erred in granting summary judgment for the appellant because there was substantial competent evidence of probable cause for the arrest. However, we affirm for the reasons which follow. In order to successfully prosecute a malicious prosecution action, the plaintiff must prove the following three elements: (1) existence of a criminal or civil judicial proceeding; (2) the defendant's initiation or participation in the proceeding, and (3) the termination of the proceeding in favor of the plaintiff, and the defendant's lack of probable cause for such proceeding. See Fla. Stat. § 768.28(1); Mann v. State, 402 So.2d 1151, 1153 (Fla

What's new in Mixed Estate:

_3. The Most Common Communication Styles_ A variety of techniques each with a dominant communication style are used in this book. In addition, often many people have multiple styles that co-exist in their communication. They tend to be particularly sensitive to context in their communication style. If one person's styles include a dominant influence of the styles of loud voices, constant interruptions, directness, and presenting information first, they might react to another person's communication style of opinionated verbal contributions, incessant interrupting, a difficulty to get facts and details in sequence, and maybe they keep the speaker on a point and reluctant to let him or her get to the point. Almost all communication styles do use style elements from the Five Styles of Presentations model (e.g., the dialogue, the spokesperson style, the directional approach, the stream of consciousness, and the alternative communication styles). All present modalities. Almost all focus on some style elements that are rarely discussed in nonpresentation contexts.
