The maternal effect, the development of traits that affect offspring throughout life, leads to progressive inhibition of fetal growth during pregnancy and the pre- and post-natal effects of the maternal phenotype. Metformin (1,1-dimethylbiguanide hydrochloride) is a safe insulin sensitizer agent widely used in the treatment of type 2 diabetes. In a previous study, we found that metformin is excreted in milk and the concentration in milk is affected by maternal treatment. However, the lack of information on the effect of metformin in offspring precludes effective management of the drug in women pregnant with affected children. Therefore, the present study evaluated the effects of metformin treatment in lactating rats on the milk protein concentration and body weight gain of the offspring. Rats were administered with metformin (500 mg/kg/day) from the eighth day of gestation to the lactation period. Control animals were injected with the vehicle solution (2 mL/kg) and no differences in the body weight gain during lactation were found. The metformin treatment during lactation significantly reduced the milk protein concentration in the first 28 days (33% of reduction), although it was not the case at 90 days of lactation (16% reduction). In summary, the metformin treatment during lactation affects the milk composition in the offspring.Q: Remove duplicate array items based on matching array value in PHP I have one input array as below where I need to remove duplicate items of array $input['message'] based on matching values of array $input['list']. $input = array("list" => array(0 => 1, 1 => 1,
